DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

Claims 12-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Amendt in view of Barradas. Amendt teaches a basin with a steam generator for directing steam within the basin that would condense and collect at the bottom of the basin. Water would collect forming a pool of water that can be called bathing water.

The steam generator directs steam through a steam vent as shown in figure 8b. Figure 8b shows a horn 44 with a steam vent out the very top or apex of the horn. This top vent directs steam upwardly. Broadly, the user is capable of placing one or both feet above this vent and thereby comprehends the claimed function of directing steam to the soles of the feet.

There is no unobviousness to provide a vibrator within the basin to massage any part of the body desired. Barradas teaches providing a vibrator and a heater in the bottom of the basin to massage and heat the feet. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify Amendt to include a vibrator and heater for the feet as taught by Barradas to provide the added benefit of vibration and heat massage.

Claims 1-11 are allowable over prior art to which the examiner is aware.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 12-21 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Since the Amendt device has a basin for accommodating both feet and since water condensation would collect in the bottom of the basin, a pool of water would form. This can be called bathing water. It is not clear how much weight can be given the description of "bathing water” since the water is not part of the claimed invention. The amount of water in the bottom of the basin is a function of intended use. If enough water collects the feet could become submerged, at least to a certain extent.

Figure 8b clearly shows a steam vent in the top portion of the horn 44 directing steam upwardly which is capable of directing steam at the soles of the feet if the user were to place their feet above the vent. Therefore Amendt comprehends the invention as claimed.
